Professional Summary

I am a dedicated student who is currently studying Web Development as a part of a Bootcamp Program facilitated by the University of Sydney. My name is Tristan Libeau, my previous skill set that I have mastered over the past 10 years is within the field of Hospitality. I have found that my overall passion for Hospitality has dwindled and I have subsequently incurred an interest in computer hardware and software. My passion for technology as a whole initially derived from building Personal Computers for myself and some friends.

I began to find myself more intrigued and wished to learn more about the Software side of computing and this led to my interest in the field of Web Development and coding. There was something truly enticing about creating a program and the conceptual framework of interacting with a computer on the most fundamental level in order to create an application with intuitive and practical purpose. The more that I learn, the more passionate I become and my initial goal upon completion of my studies is to find a Job as a Junior Developer in a Software Company where I can begin to flourish as a Developer and to work on projects as apart of a large-scale team with a uniform
